PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

The National War Savings Committee in England has drawn attention to the fact that several commercial firms, for the purpose of increasing their sales, have made offers to charity organisations to the effect that they are prepared to pay over to such charities part of their takings of money during special sales. These offers are obviously made with the object of attracting the general public to purchase goods from the firms in question. The committee point out that, in order to bring the war to a successful conclusion, it is obsolutely essential that all unnecessary expenditure should cease, and that all available capital and labour should be placed at the disposal of the State to assist in conducting the War. Unnecessary purchases naturally diminish the availabe resources of the country, and any scheme, therefore, which tends, in the name of charity, to act as an incentive to unnecessary expenditure is not in the interest of the State.
